Chili Rebellion.

By Cable and Associated Press.]

LONDON, June 23.—A dispatch published here to-day from the Chilean government says the rebels have lost all their moral force, and that all action upon their part in the south has ceased. On the other hand, the dispatch states that President Balmaceda is taking active steps to increase the strength of his army, and that loyal war-ships are attacking rebel ports while the rebel squadron avoids fighting. In conclusion, the statement is made that the rebels are prolonging the war solely to enrich themselves with the nitrate deposits of Tarapaca. Nineteen provinces, it is further stated, are under the control of President Balmaceda, these provinces being inhabited by three million people, while the rebel provinces are only inhabited by 150,000 people, one-half of whom are said to be foreigners.

A correspondent at Iquique telegraphs his paper that Balmaceda is likely to have trouble with the British government over the collection from a vessel flying the British flag of duty on nitrate brought into Toropilla. The British minister has made a vigorous protest. What action Balmaceda will take cannot be learned, but probably he will return the money. The correspondent also states it would seem the British government is doing all in its power, without resort to arms, to aid the insurgent cause. He further states that prospects look very gloomy for Balmaceda.

President of Peru.

By Associated Press.]

WASHINGTON, June 23.—A private letter from Peru brings information that Admiral Brown and other officers of the United States naval fleet on the west coast of South America paid an official visit to the President of Peru on the 5th day of May and were received by him with great cordiality. The President expressed great interest in the Chicago exposition and said although the country was very poor, they all realized the importance of being well represented at the exposition, and should make the finest display the means of the government would permit.

The Secretary of the Navy, under authority conferred by the naval appropriation bill for the naval militia, has issued the following regulations: Upon receipt of a return from the Governor of any State of the number of men actually mustered in and serving in the naval militia of said State on the 1st day of July, 1891, the Secretary of the Navy will allot to the State, making the return from the general appropriation for the naval militia, a sum equal to twelve dollars per head for each officer and man so returned.

Veta Grande Mine.

By Associated Press.]

CITY OF MEXICO, June 23.—The Veta Grande mine at Parral, which broke its pump a year ago and flooded the mine to the fourth level, is now putting in new pumps and other machinery at an expenditure of $60,000, preparatory to draining the mine. This mine has been worked for 200 years, producing millions. The average yearly output before the mine was flooded was 24,000 tons of 30 to 40 ounces milling ore. Several mines adjoining have been sold to American companies.

Cash Balance.

By Associated Press.]

WASHINGTON, June 23.—A statement prepared in the office of the Secretary of the Treasury giving operations to date, shows a net balance in the Treasury of $4,765,000.

Barnaby Will Contest.

By Associated Press.]

PROVIDENCE (R. I.), June 23.—The contestants of the second Barnaby will asked for a continuance of probation until September. The request was granted.

China News.

Special to the GAZETTE.]

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—The steamship Gaelic arrived this morning from Hongkong and Yokohama. The North China Daily News, in its account on May 16th of the Wuhu riots, says it has been reported for several days that a mob of Chinese had determined to loot and burn the property of the Jesuits at Wuhu, owing to the rumor that a number of Chinese children had been killed and their eyes taken out to make medicine for the Jesuit fathers. On the afternoon of Tuesday, May 12th, a mob of Chinese gathered about the premises of the fathers and broke through the walls, eventually setting fire to the cathedral and other buildings around driving the missionaries out and pillaging the place. The mob then proceeded to the English Consulate and destroyed considerable property by throwing stones. The arrival of the Taotai and the coolness of the British Consul alone saved the buildings from being set on fire. The Consul and wife escaped the mob by dressing in Chinese costume and hurrying to the Custom House, and embarked with other foreign residents on the China Navigation Company's receiving ship. A number of foreigners, headed by the English Consul, armed themselves and passed the night at the Customs House and assisted by the Taotai repelled the mob, who twice during the night, made an attempt to loot and set on fire the Custom House and residences of the foreign officials. The next morning an immense crowd again set fire to the Custom House and surrounding buildings, but the Custom's staff fully armed, charged the natives and again put out the fires.

In the afternoon three Chinese gun boats, which were escorting Shen Ping Cheng, Governor of Anhui, up the river arrived on the scene and learning of the riot began to fire blank cartridges, which had the effect of frightening the mob. Some two hundred soldiers arrived from Tientsin, and these lent additional protection to the foreign residents. The mob did not make any demonstrations against the Methodist Episcopal (American) Mission, but advised by the British Consul, the missionaries from that point also embarked on the Telsing which brought them, together with the ladies and children of Wuhu, to Shanghai. At Chianking the priests who escaped from Wuhu in a boat were picked up. The News says there was only one British man-of-war on the north China station at the time of the riot and this one, the gunboat Linnet, was near Wosung, but was sent for and proceeded to Wuhu. On the 16th of May, four days after the Wuhu riots, the natives of Nanking made an attack on the Catholic mission there. Rumors have reached them that Taotai of Wuhu has forwarded a dispatch to the authorities declaring the alleged deeds of the missionaries were true. The priests succeeded in keeping the mob off and one of the assailants was arrested and punished. The Catholic mission was not the only one attacked, for a crowd equally as large made a descent on the inland mission near the north gate, but the Chinese authorities arrived in time to prevent any serious damage. The crowd lingered about the missions during the next two days and native women came to the Orphanage to reclaim their children, who had been left there.

Nashville Bank Fails.

By Associated Press.]

NASHVILLE (Tenn.), June 23.—Expressions of regret are general at the failure of the Nashville Savings Bank and proffers of substantial aid were made immediately from all sides. The institution has been in existence something over a quarter of a century and been throughout this period one of the most highly esteemed banking houses in Nashville. It is hoped that within a few weeks business will be resumed. The assets are fully equal to the liabilities.

River Falling.

By Associated Press.]

ST. JOSEPH (Mo.), June 23.—The river is falling and the fear of a flood is subsiding. It will be a week at least before the government work can be resumed. Farms between here and Watheba, Kas., suffered great damage to crops from overflow.

Kansas City, June 23.

By Associated Press.]

MISSOURI river here has fallen six inches since last night. A special from Sioux City says it is falling there.

Bordeaux Street Cars.

By Cable and Associated Press.]

BORDEAUX, June 23.—The municipal authorities have suspended the horse-car service pending a settlement of the dispute between the employer and company. Military forces are continually patrolling the streets. There has been a number of conflicts between the gendarmes and the rioters, during which many of the former were injured.

Andover Case.

By Associated Press.]

BOSTON, June 23.—It was generally supposed that a full court decided the celebrated Andover case. It is now learned that the court has not acted upon the various questions in the controversy, and the case may possibly be reargued. In any event, a decision by a full bench will not be reached for a year at least.

Prince George of Greece.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 23.—Prince George of Greece, who was so instrumental in saving the life of the Russian Prince Imperial from the attack of the Japanese policemen at Yokohama, arrived to-day on the Gaelic, having left the Czarowitz at Vladivostok.

Guthrie Titles.

By Associated Press.]

WASHINGTON, June 23.—The Secretary has rendered a decision in the case of the town site of East Guthrie, North Guthrie, and Capital Hill, Oklahoma, against Veeder B. Paine and other agricultural claimants. The Secretary affirms the decision of the Commissioner, rejecting the claim of the town site of North Guthrie and directs that a hearing be had to determine the rights of the respective agricultural claimants entries, made by those who entered the Territory prior to the hour fixed by the proclamation for opening the land to settlement. As to the claims of Veeder B. Paine and Zenophon Fitzgerald, the Secretary finds their Homestead Entries were not made in good faith, but on the contrary, having knowledge that the town site would be located at a certain point, entered the tracts with a view of speculating in town lots. Although they were on the ground a few minutes prior to the arrival of the town site claimants their motives were taken into consideration and the land awarded to the town site people, thus reversing the decision of the Commissioner of the general Land Office, application of the Mayor and others to enter the west half of Section 9 as a town site. East Guthrie rejected on the ground that the application was made in the interest of men, many of whom violated the law in entering the Territory prior to the date fixed by the President in his proclamation.

Bardsley's Sentence Postponed.

By Associated Press.]

PHILADELPHIA, June 23.—John Bardsley, ex-City Treasurer, who several days ago pleaded guilty to embezzlement of public funds, was brought in court for sentence to-day, but on motion of the District Attorney, sentence was postponed indefinitely. The District Attorney opened the proceedings by stating that he wished to call some witnesses so the Court could get some information on which to pass sentence.

An expert accountant testified that Bardsley, in his two years and a half incumbency of the office of City Treasurer, received $200,000 in interest on public funds; that Bardsley used $500,000 in speculation and had loaned $600,000 to one banker and $200,000 to another. He also loaned $400,000 to the Bradford Mills Company, of which he was owner. Bardsley also used and converted to his own use $57,000 worth of government bonds he held for the city, but this money was subsequently returned. He found that Bardsley's stock operations cost him in the neighborhood of $100,000.

Efforts at Reciprocity.

By Cable and Associated Press.]

OTTAWA, June 23.—Just before the Senate adjourned last night, a message was received from the Governor General transmitting further papers relating to the extension and development of trade between the United States and Canada, including Newfoundland. The correspondence consists of dispatches which passed between Lord Salisbury, the British minister in Washington, and Lord Knutsford. After negotiations had been going on for some time, a draft of the proposed Convention between Newfoundland and the United States, which has been privately communicated by Pannecote to Blaine for the arrangement of the fisheries question and trade relations, was transmitted to the Canadian government by General Stanley. The next dispatch is Lord Stanley's cable message to Knutsford in which he remonstrates in the strongest terms against the signature of the proposed Convention at Washington, as it would place the fish and other products of Canada at a disadvantage in the United States market. Knutsford then in a dispatch to the government says: In the present urgent condition, Newfoundland's unfortunate feeling will be cited by the opposition in Canada, to the efforts of Newfoundland to relieve its distress. Any reciprocity treaty between Canada and the United States would, as previously, be framed so as not to place imports from this country at a disadvantage, and it is presumed Canada would wish to retain control over her tariff, with a view to a possible extension of her trade with the colonies and England.

In the next dispatch Stanley replies, saying the Canadian ministers are prepared to open negotiations immediately on lines already laid down, provided representatives at Washington could be commissioners associated with the British ministry and empowered to negotiate directly, instead of being mere delegates. Pannecote on November 28th received a dispatch from Stanley, in which the latter announced the Canadian government was prepared to arrange for commercial relations with the United States and wishing that government might be informed.

A Joint Commission such as that of '71, proposed by Lord Stanley to deal with the question at issue and prepare a treaty respecting the renewal of the reciprocity treaty of '54, with modifications and reconstructions of the treaty of '88. With respect to the Atlantic fisheries, with the aim of securing free admission into the United States market of Canadian fishery products, in return for facilities to be granted the United States fishermen to buy bait and supplies, and to transship their cargoes in Canada, all such privileges to be mutual; the protection of mackerel and other fishes on the Atlantic ocean and in inland waters also; relaxation of the seaboard coasting laws of the two countries, and of the coasting laws of the inland water dividing Canada from the United States; mutual salvage and saving of wrecked vessels, and arrangements for settling boundaries between Canada.

Blaine replied, that to endeavor to obtain the appointment of a formal commission to arrive at a reciprocity treaty would be useless, but that the United States government was willing to discuss the question in private with Pannecote and one or more delegates from Canada and to consider every subject as to which there was hope for agreement on the ground of mutual interest and not to risk a grave step, until by private discussion, he had satisfied himself that good ground existed for expecting an agreement by means of a commission. He added he would be prepared to enter into private negotiations at any time after March 4th.

The next was a dispatch from Pannecote to Lord Stanley, under date of January 13th, '91, and encloses the draft of a convention between the governments of the United States and Newfoundland, which was submitted to him by Blaine. Provisions of this proposed treaty were made public since and have been discussed in the newspapers.

Distributing the Surplus.

The Alta gives the Democrats something to think and talk about in the following editorial: It appears that the Administration has distributed the greater part of the surplus which Mr. Cleveland regarded with such terror when he sent his famous free-trade message to Congress. A great deal of this surplus has been used in payment of public debts, a considerable sum in payment of pensions, a smaller amount in building ships and casting big guns, several millions in returning to States moneys advanced during the war, with minor expenditures for various matters, some of which might have been postponed. For example, there was no absolute need that the government should at the last session appropriate money to meet claims that had been "stood off" by the last fifteen Administrations. But as there was a surplus in the Treasury it was distributed where it was thought it would do the most good. The Democrats are not so well pleased at the distribution of the surplus as they expected they would be. During the latter part of Cleveland's Administration the surplus was regarded with considerable apprehension. The Republicans had a right, therefore, to expect Democratic commendation of a policy which distributed the surplus with neatness and dispatch and without injury to the country, and are somewhat surprised at the tone Democratic journals take in commenting upon the success of the Harrison Administration in doing what the Cleveland Administration could see no way to do. In these Democratic comments we do not find much complaint about the manner of distribution except as respects pensions. Paying money out to old soldiers seems to our Democratic friends sheer waste. Taking a long view of the financial situation there does not seem much cause for alarm. The Government will manage in one way or another to make ends meet. It will not be called upon to make such large payments on account of the public debt for some years to come as in the year just past. The interest account is reduced to about $32,000,000, and in the absence of new legislation the money required for pensions will grow less with each year. There is no occasion for a panic. The Democrats will do well not to depend too much upon a financial crisis to carry them over the next election.

The Sacramento News truthfully says: A newspaper may boom a town through its editorial and news columns, but the critical investor looks to the advertising columns for substantial evidence of push and life. To him they are a thermometer, measuring the intensity of the public warmth; they are the pulse which indicates the healthy or unhealthy condition of the collective body of people; they tell him what he wishes to know, whether or not the community is up to the times in business matters.

The Democratic party will have to throw its spit-balls at something else besides the McKinley bill or they won't be in it two years hence.

More Diphtheria.

The Virginia Chronicle of last night reports the former cases of diphtheria as out of danger, but adds as follows: The Board of Health reports two new cases of a mild form—one in the family of John Cox on A street, whose little daughter is down with it, and the other, the 14-year-old son of Jack Curran, who lives below F street between Union and Taylor. Both cases are of a mild type and fatal results are not anticipated.

Snow Storm at Ely.

The White Pine News of Ely of the 20th inst. says: Last Sunday the god of the storm turned loose here in fine style. It rained, sleeted and snowed the whole long day, and when night drew his shadowy mantle o'er hill and vale, more than an inch of sleet and snow covered the ground, making it hard to realize that it was the middle of June and not the middle of January.

THE MEXICAN ARMY.

Why the Strict Enforcement of Discipline is Necessary.

Its Ranks Contain Many Criminals, Who Are Summarily Dealt with in Case of Insubordination—A Military Penal Institution.

The discipline of the Mexican army is not tempered with mercy. The dispatch from Juarez which stated that four Mexican soldiers who had taken part in a mutiny would be shot the next morning occasioned no surprise to people who know how summarily the Mexican government deals with cases of that sort. A mutinous soldier stands very little chance of his life if the commanding officer thinks he ought to be shot.

Although this rigid enforcement of discipline may seem harsh to Americans, it is, says the Denver Republican, in probably a majority of cases, necessary in Mexico. The Mexican army is composed chiefly of Indians. Indeed, by far the greatest part of the Mexican population is either of pure Indian blood or of Indian blood mixed with that of some other race. There are very few full-blooded whites in Mexico. Soldiers like those which compose nearly the whole of the Mexican army have to be dealt with very rigidly in order to maintain discipline. The Mexican army is a kind of penal institution in this, that a great many criminals who are not shot are forced into the army. It was in this way that brigandage was stopped in that country. The leaders of the brigands were given offices in the army and their men were forced into the ranks. Although this broke up the lawless bands, it introduced a very dangerous element into the army, which can be held in check only by the most rigid discipline.

In Italy and Russia the army is looked upon as a kind of school for men of the lower class. They are taught obedience, and a national spirit is developed in them by their connection with the military arm of the government. They are withdrawn from local associations which might weaken their attachment to the government, and they are taught to look up to the authority of the nation as their guide. The maintenance of an army or such a purpose as this would be wholly contrary to good policy in a highly civilized country. But in Russia and Italy it serves a good purpose, and what is true of those countries is, particularly, true of Mexico. The Mexican army amounts to about thirty-one thousand officers and men. It is completely under the command of President Diaz, who can use it as he pleases for the maintenance of his authority and the preservation of order. If it were not for the army Mexico would probably break out in a revolution in a very short time, because there is a strong element of opposition to Diaz among the people.

An arbitrary government is better than no government at all, and although the government of Diaz is very much like a military despotism it is the best government that Mexico ever had. It is stable; and if he and his successors shall maintain a government of this sort for the next twenty-five years, Mexico will by the end of that time have advanced so far that the people will be able to appreciate liberty in something like the American understanding of the term. But this would be impossible without the aid of the army. Indeed, it would be better to raise the army to one hundred thousand men rather than reduce it to a force too small to hold the revolutionists and the lawless characters generally in subjection.

WOMEN AS FUR BUYERS.

As a Rule They Have But a Limited Knowledge of the Goods. Very few women have any practical knowledge of furs, declares the Brooklyn Eagle. The buying and selling of skins have been principally the business of shrewd, sharp men, but in one of Brooklyn's stores there is a young woman who can tell you at once the quality of the skin in question. She has much practical knowledge of the goods she handles and it very often happens that customers ask for her, feeling great confidence in what she tells them. This girl not only took the prize for having sold the largest number of garments through the holidays, but has also just taken a very large order, perhaps the largest single order ever taken in Brooklyn or possibly New York. Moreover, the garment is for a Brooklyn woman, to be of cloth lined with silver tipped Russian sable, the linings alone to cost one thousand four hundred and eighty dollars. It is to be worn next winter. It is a well-known fact that the price of furs is continually on the increase. A buyer of skins says that he has just paid fifteen thousand dollars for the same number of skins which last year at the same time cost the firm only eight thousand dollars. At this rate furs will soon be a great luxury. They are not so extravagant, however, as it at first appears, for often linings or sets, well known are handed down as heirlooms through several generations. A woman who took her grandmother's two sets of mink—tippet, muff and cuffs—and made them into a fancy floor mat, was inclined to regret the proceeding when told the first of the winter mink was to be fashionable, but mink as a wearing fur has not been a success. The furs look quite as well made into a hearth rug as they would have done made over into a cape.

A Hardy Dog.

The Genoa (Cal.) Courier tells this story: "A few weeks ago a snowstorm occurred near the site of the old Remis mill in Alpine county, in which a woodman lost his life. A dog was missing, and a few days ago, while one of the woodmen was digging out some of his lost goods, he found a dog sitting on his haunches in a hole just large enough for his body, under six feet of solid snow. After fifteen days of imprisonment, without food or water, the little dog came out all right."

A Woman's Story.

A woman, who was worn by a London bride had a rich white silk royal train, bordered with white ostrich feathers, and opened over a beautiful white velvet skirt richly embroidered with pearls. One-half of the bodice front was of white silk; the other of velvet draped with crepe de Chine. The tulle veil was held in place by three diamond stars.

Steady Progress

Has characterized Hood's Sarsaparilla ever since it was placed before the public. When introduced, its sales have grown from year to year, until now it is the most popular and most successful medicine offered. Any druggist will confirm this statement. The secret of this success lies in the fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla is a medicine of merit. It does actually accomplish all that is claimed for it, and when given a fair trial, is reasonably certain to be of benefit.

Positive Statements.

"Since Hood's Sarsaparilla has been in my hands for sale I have had frequent and unreserved testimonials in its favor. Although carrying this preparation for less than one year, my sales have been greater than of any similar preparation, and the testimonials in its favor are at once positive and personally noticeable." A. Watson, Hallsburg, Cal.

Sells On Its Merits.

"My boys say, 'Papa, why don't you buy more of Hood's Sarsaparilla at a time; we are always short.' It sells on its own merits." F. Brad, Portland, Oregon; the oldest druggist in Oregon.

CONSTIPATION

Afflicts half the American people yet there is only one preparation of Sarsaparilla that acts on the bowels and reaches this important trouble, and that is Joy's Vegetable Sarsaparilla. It relieves it in 24 hours, and an occasional dose prevents return. We refer by permission to C. E. Elkington, 125 Locust Avenue, San Francisco; J. H. Brown, Potluma; H. S. Winn, Geary Court, San Francisco, and hundreds of others who have used it in constipation. One letter is a sample of hundreds. Elkington, writes: "I have been for years subject to bilious headaches and constipation. Have been so bad for a year back have had to take a physic every other night or else I would have a headache. After taking one bottle of J. V. S., I am in splendid shape. It has done wonderful things for me."

THE LAST.

Thesis of Miss Carrie Belknap of Carson on Hawthorne.

Perhaps I can in no better way, show you the delicate play of fancy and the keen imagination of this author, than in quoting to you a passage from a letter to his sweetheart: "I always feel as if your letters were too sacred to be read in the midst of people, and (you will smile) I never read them without first washing my hands."

The sentiment of reverence was very highly developed in Nathaniel Hawthorne. His ideas were the loftiest and purest. He never stooped to the trifles in the most trivial household duties any more than in public places. His forefathers, for ages back had been mariners. They were good, earnest men, rather distinguished for their sternness. His mother was of a gentle, lovable disposition, and from this union came one great genius.

He inherited the Puritan sternness but none of his superstition. When a small child, he was fond of taking long walks alone. He would wander over hills untrodden by other feet, until he had worn a deep path. He preferred the bright waters and quiet nooks of the lake to its busy harbor. Even as a child he was a great reader. His favorite authors seem to have been Shakespeare, Milton, Pope and Thomson. Frequently he would go about reciting quotations, the one that passed his lips often than any other, being from Shakespeare's Richard III—"My lord, stand back and let the coffin pass."

While at college he was an excellent classical student, and wrote several English poems that were creditable to him.

He was undecided about the profession he was to adopt, and in one of his letters to his mother said, "I don't want to be a doctor and live by men's diseases; nor a minister, to live by their sins; nor a lawyer, and live by their quarrels. So I don't see that there is anything left for me, but to be an author."

After his graduation he returned to Salem and led a life of isolation. His mornings were devoted to study; his afternoons to writing, and his evenings to walking. He was scarcely known by sight to his townsmen, and he held so little communication with the members of his family, that his meals were frequently left at his door. He wrote a great deal, but many of his manuscripts were destroyed because his taste was so difficult to please.

In 1842 Hawthorne married Miss Sophia Peabody. He had been in love with her several years before their marriage, but she had been an invalid for a great while, and said that she never could marry until she had been cured of the dreadful headaches with which she was afflicted. Love seems to have been the physician that overcame this trouble.

A man's life is frequently influenced by the conduct and character of his wife, which we find was the case with Hawthorne.

Mrs. Hawthorne was a woman of fine understanding and great culture. She possessed gentle humor and sunniness of disposition. She was like her husband in many respects. Her sentiments were always of the loftiest nature. Hawthorne stood rather in awe of her; yet he says "awe" is not the word, for that would imply sternness; it was a feeling that couldn't be expressed. Without her influence, Hawthorne never could have been the man he was.

The works of Hawthorne are beautiful and sublime. They are clothed in deep mystery—sort of a haze that cannot be penetrated. His coloring is all done with sombre hues. He chooses those as those that best portray the mysteries of this human life.

"The Scarlet Letter" is considered his masterpiece. It has been spoken of as "the most sublime book of the most original genius ever born in America." The theme of this romance is founded upon the nature and consequences of unfaithfulness.

Little Pearl is taken from the character of his daughter Una, whose character he considered almost supernatural—sometimes angelic, sometimes elfish, good and evil were so strangely mingled in her nature. At times she was so wild and unreasonable, at others so wise; she was alternately hard and sympathetic. Pearl was natural, yet unlike any other child.

"The Scarlet Letter" will be read, enjoyed and admired as long as the English language continues to exist. Nearly all of Hawthorne's characters are taken from real life. "The Marble Faun" was sketched during his residence in Italy. Hilda seems to be the personification of goodness. It is said she possesses many of Mrs. Hawthorne's traits. The latter, however, has much the broader nature of the two; Hilda lacks many of the happier characteristics of Mrs. Hawthorne. Miriam is taken from a beautiful Jewess whom Hawthorne saw at one time.

"Septimius Felton" is one of his minor works. It was not published until after his death. Then his daughter Una and Robert Browning gathered together the manuscript, and published it just as it was. In many places he had inclosed certain passages for the purpose of remodeling them. Several pages had been lost and this made the sense rather disconnected. It is a good illustration of Hawthorne's peculiarities of style and the manner in which he composed his works.

The "House of Seven Gables" is one of his best productions. It was written in about five months and indicates close application. Phoebe is a bright, happy little personage, and into the Pyncheon house brought a flood of sunshine.

Hawthorne has a curious power of analysis, and is a "real student of human nature. His characters show careful development; he creates rather than manufactures. Day by day they disclose themselves to us, as do our friends—their good and bad qualities are not to be judged of as soon as the characters are introduced. Some of the stories are not really known until the story is finished, and frequently then there is mystery and doubt.

His profession was but a means of activity. When writing his whole heart was in his work, yet he was not so wrapped up in his profession that he was not interested in anything else. He was always surrounded by a large circle of friends and deeply loved by all of them. He made himself very agreeable, and could adapt himself to the manners and customs of those with whom he was thrown. Yet he could make confidants of none of them. His nature was too deep to be abased; it was necessary to study the effects he produced, rather than the man himself. He could better tell the world at large his innocent feelings than the friends with whom he held converse. His wife seems to be the only one to whom he could confide everything. Before he met her he cared nothing for the society of any one.

After he became a man of fame his company was sought by people of society. His indifference to it grew less, but it was never wholly overcome. In describing a reception which he attended, he says he felt like some strange insect imprisoned under a tumbler, with a dozen eyes watching whatever he did. He was nervously inclined, but after he became interested in conversation this nervousness passed away. He was not a ready talker but every word was significant.

Hawthorne had a kind, good face which was very attractive. One said, "giving me a man or an angel?" "Are you a man or an angel?"

In his youth indolence seemed a predominant trait in his character, but in due time this was conquered. He couldn't bear the idea of being told that he was to be a distinguished man.

Lacking the accomplishment of verse Hawthorne is, in the highest sense, a poet. His works are pervaded by a manly personality, yet a feminine delicacy. His language is strictly pure. His high moral tone and purity have a wonderful effect upon those who read his works.

IDIOTIC BRUTES.

Sheep the Biggest Fools of Any Dumb Animals That Walk the Earth.

"No animal that walks on four legs is as big a fool as a sheep," says a sheep-raiser. "We have to watch them every minute, and if vigilance is relaxed for an instant the entire flock is likely to practically commit suicide. In handling most animals some degree of self-help or intelligence can be relied on to aid the owner in saving their lives, but sheep seem to set deliberately to work to kill themselves. If caught in a storm on the plains they will drift before the wind and die of cold and exposure rather than move 100 yards to windward to obtain shelter in their corral. To drive sheep against the wind is absolutely impossible. I once lost over 1,000 head because I could not drive them to a corral not 200 feet away. In the corral they are still more foolish. If a storm comes up they all move down wind until stopped by the fence. Then begins the proceedings so much dreaded by sheepmen, known as 'piling.' The sheep will climb over each other's backs until they are heaped up ten feet high. Of course, all those at the bottom are smothered. Not one has sense enough to seek shelter under the lee of the fence, as a horse or a dog would do. Again, if a sheep gets into a quicksand and the fence is in sight to those that come immediately after, but the whole flock will follow its leader to destruction. No more expensively stupid brute than a sheep walks."

A NOVEL METHOD.

A Pacific Coast Race Horse Conditioned for Long Distance Contest by Swimming.

Bonanza, a horse raised and sold East a few years ago by Theodore Winters, won a big race recently at Sheephead Bay. He is a long distance flyer of the Hooker strain out of Etta O'Neill. Bonanza is very rapid but cannot stand the hard training necessary to put him in condition without his legs giving out. His owner hit upon a novel plan to give him his work and save his legs, and every day the noble animal is taken into the bay at Sheephead and behind a swift sailing craft is swum several miles and in that way his muscles are hardened and he is conditioned for a long distance run without subjecting him to the muscle-trying ordeal of galloping on the hard track.

Reno, Nebraska, Again.

Another batch of letters intended for Reno, Nevada, have found their way to Reno, Nebraska. They are addressed to Lange & Schmidt, M. A. Parrott, Chas. Conner, John E. Bray, B. F. Leete, W. N. Scott, F. C. Peacan, Abraham Bros., M. Fredrick, H. P. Crockett, F. A. Barnes, J. F. Emmett, J. M. Parker, W. L. Needham, S. T. Taylor, A. B. Shaw, Thos. Tomami, E. Trescott, W. E. Everett. So many people make a mistake in the letter v that it confounds the two offices. Post-master Kraus has sent for the mail.

Good Portraits.

The People's Advocate contains the following: The Reno GAZETTE of June 11th publishes very good portraits of Hon. Benjamin Currier, G. C.; George A. King, G. V. C.; A. B. Stoddard, G. C. of R. & S.; H. J. Thyes, G. M. of Ex.; and H. C. McMillen, Supreme G. R. of the Order of Knights of Pythias, together with a brief biographical sketch of each. The K. of P. all over the State will very much appreciate this courtesy.

A Traveler's Observation.

John Sparkes returned yesterday from a trip to Salt Lake, Denver and Ogden. He says that the country he visited while away is dull and every one is complaining of a scarcity of money. He says Reno will stand a comparison with any of the cities named in a business point of view. In fact he hears less complaint here than anywhere. Mr. Sparkes says of Salt Lake is at least ten years ahead of the surrounding country.

Northern News.

The Alturas New Era contains the following: J. M. Fulton, Master of Transportation, is here making the acquaintance of our merchants, and told them they could ship all the wheat they wanted to Amadee and get $1.50 per 100 lbs. He says that he is satisfied that this country will have a railroad before long, and expressed himself highly pleased over our resources and surroundings.

Geiger-Grade Victims.
Dan Harrington, one of the victims of the upset on the Geiger grade on Friday, died in Gold Hill on Sunday morning. He never regained consciousness after the accident. His sister, Miss Nellie Harrington, who was seriously injured at the time her brother was, is very low and more dangerously injured than at first supposed.

Died of His Injury.
In Virginia City on Saturday night Ed. Gareau, who was caved on in the mines there, died from lockjaw. In the accident at the time of being caved on his hand was nearly cut in two. When on last Saturday his jaw became set the physicians amputated the hand above the wrist, but it gave no relief and the patient died.

MISCELLANEOUS

OVER 120 MILES AN HOUR.
How One May Some Day Travel at Twice
a Locomotive's Speed.
One of the questions most interesting to electrical engineers to-day is that of high speed electric traction, and experiment and practice show it to be attainable. Two ideas have been borne in mind. The success of the electric street railways, of which about 500 are already in operation in America, and upon which speed equal to that of ordinary steam trains has been reached, has suggested that by giving the electric current its greatest play, enormous speed
may be kept up in traversing long distances. One of the ideas, therefore, has been to transport mails and express matter in this manner, and apparatus has been devised by which a long train car has been sucked into and then repelled from each of a series of electric solenoids, just like a pencil being shot through a succession of rubber or wooden rings. By this means a very high rate of speed for the small car has been attained. But the second and even more fascinating idea is to hurl electric passenger cars through the air at such a rate that a journey between New York and Chicago would occupy only a few hours, and the result is much nearer than the public has any notion of.
Now, taking the actual figures yielded by the experiments already made at Baltimore, and working out the requirements of a service between New York and Chicago, it has been found that a double track equipment complete for 1,000 miles, with twenty trains each way per day, could be put in for $20, 000,000, or $200,000 per mile. The total operating and maintenance expenses per train of three cars would be about $400, each train going at the rate of 125 miles an hour. The receipts from the two carrying cars per train would be $500, leaving $100 profit on each of the 40 trains, or $4,000 per day, which figures out a fair return on the apparently big investment named, without any very wild calculation as to patronage.
The feature of such a service would be the running of very frequent trains and the cutting down of the time required for the trip of 1,000 miles to just about eight hours. A like service of 500 miles, connecting Reno, New York, Philadelphia and Washington, would be more profitable, and it is likely that the first road will be built with this route in view. This scheme, just outlined, has been promoted by the very first electricians and experts in this country to be entirely feasible and practicable as an engineering enterprise.
A prominent civil engineer has expressed the opinion that safety from derailment at very high speeds would be best secured by very slightly curving the line of road just sufficiently to cause the flanges of the wheels to bear constantly on one side. With that construction he considers that any possible speed that could be got from electric motors, say up to 200 hundred miles an hour, would be perfectly safe.

COLORING THE HAIR.

An Old Man Who May Be Anywhere from Eighty to One Hundred and Twenty.
There is an old fellow whom I met in my walks about town who has carried to an extreme the attempt to disguise his natural appearance, and the consequence is that it is wholly ineffective, writes Taverer in the Boston Post.
The main trouble is to tell how venerable he is; he may be eighty and he may be one hundred and twenty for all his looks indicate. I have sometimes noticed that a decidedly youthful appearance has been given to a man by his relinquishing his hair dye and coming out in the white chevelure which is most becoming to him. This was the case with the late Lester Wallack, who, however, persisted in wearing his mustache black, as if to emphasize this the natural color of his beard. Since gray hair has become the fashion, there is less resort to dyes than formerly, but I suppose the witticism still holds good for many people that they admire gray hairs on everybody but themselves.
Titmouse's experience in "Ten Thousand A Year" with the use of hair dye ought to be read by every person who is ambitious of making a disguise by these means; and even more important would be the perusal of some chemical treatise showing the poisonous effect of minerals which enter into such compounds. And yet, with the fullest knowledge of its deleterious effects, vanity makes many persons "stand the hazard of a dye."
Utilizing Furnace Gases.
At three or four of the Scotch ironworks, the Furnace Gases Company are paying a yearly rental for the right of collecting the smoke and gases from the blast furnaces. These are passed through several miles of wrought-iron tubing, gradually diminishing in size from six feet to about eighteen inches, and as the gases cool there is deposited a considerable yield of oil. One establishment in Glasgow they pump and collect about sixty million feet of furnace gas per day, and recover, on an average, twenty-five thousand gallons of furnace oils per week, using the residual gases, consisting chiefly of carbon monoxide, as fuel for distilling and other purposes, and a considerable yield of sulphate of ammonia is also obtained.

When it is desired to have the gloves cover the entire arm, as may occur with evening dress, they are secured to the shoulders by straps of satin ribbon that buckle on the gown.

new attractions to the guests every day.
THE ROOMS are well ventilated and lighted and sunny.
THE BOARD is of the best, both in quality and quantity. The finest meats, fish and fowl in the market.
THE BAR is second to none on the coast.
Give us a call and be convinced.
W. R. CHAMBERLAIN, - Manager
THE GRAND CENTRAL.

THIS WELL-KNOWN AND POPULAR
hotel is three stories in height and contains 26 rooms all well lighted and sunny, and furnished in modern style. The dining room is a home for the traveler, where he can get the very best and most affordable, and the bar is second to none in the State. Try the Grand Central once and you won't stop anywhere else.
